Canada

Canada is much more than the 'Great White North'. From the 250km Vancouver Island Golf Trail in the West to tiny but golf-packed Prince Edward Island in the East, Canada's diverse geography and vast open spaces make it one of the world's most interesting and challenging golf destinations. Canadians love the game – 20% of citizens swing a club, the world's highest per capita participation rate. There are over 2,000 courses from coast to coast, and the season is longer than you might think – often as long as eight months, and year-round in places like Vancouver and Victoria. May to October is prime golf season, when the temperature is warm and the grass is green. In fact, Southern Ontario is considered to have the best turfgrass-growing conditions in the world. With scenic backdrops ranging from mountains to prairie, Canadian Shield to seashore, the toughest thing about golfing in Canada may be keeping your eye on the ball.

Jamaica

Tryall is located on the shores of the Caribbean Sea, approximately twelve miles west of Montego Bay on the northern coast of the Island of Jamaica. The Plantation consists of 2,200 acres of land, which had been owned by one family for over a century. It is an area of scenic beauty, fronting one and one-half miles of the Sea, and having a wide variety of beautiful trees. The Flint River, fed by springs from the mountains, runs through the plantation for some four miles.

Tryall's 18-hole, par-72 championship course was designed by Ralph Plummer and has played host to such prestigious international events as the Johnnie Walker World Championship, last won here by Fred Couples in 1995.

The signature par-three 4th hole incorporates the natural challenges of the Caribbean Sea and the Flint River, while the memorable par-four 7th hole provides a dramatic tee-shot through the stone pillars of the historic aqueduct that feeds the adjacent waterwheel.

Scattered across the lush hillside and along the shore, Tryall's lovely Estate Villas have private pools, manicured gardens and Tryall's greatest asset a full-time staff to cater to your every need.
